THE EAST AFRICAN COMMUNITY HISTORICAL BACKGROUND OF THE EAST AFRICAN COMMUNITY (1967-1977)

WEEK TWO

LESSON 1

East African Community (EAC)

Close cooperation among six countries

Six countries in East Africa are striving for closer cooperation. Kenya, Tanzania and Uganda founded the East African Community (EAC) in 2000 and were joined by Burundi and Rwanda in 2007 and recently the South Sudan in April 2016. The member states agreed on the establishment of a common market for goods, services, capital and labour as well as a monetary and political union in the medium term. On behalf of the German federal government, KfW Development Bank provides support to the regional economic integration process in the EAC. KfW cooperates closely with the EAC Secretariat as the strategic coordinating body to ensure investments in the areas of infrastructure, social security systems, health and education in the member states can be fully harnessed at regional level. Furthermore, the modern EAC Secretariat building in Arusha, Tanzania financed by Germany has today become an important symbol of the close cooperation.

FACTORS INFLUENCING POPULATION DISTRIBUTION AND HOW NATURAL FACTORS.

1. Climate

How? Areas with high rainfall and cool temperatures are densely populated while areas which have little rainfall and are hot, are sparsely populated.

2. Soil fertility/ Nature of soils.

How? Areas with fertile soils attract a high population unlike areas with infertile soils.

3. Relief/Altitude

How? Highlands attract a dense population since they have cool climate while very low-lying areas have a sparse population due to high temperatures.

- Highland areas are well drained and receive much rainfall which attracts dense population while low lying areas are water logged discouraging settlement.
- Very steep areas discourage settlement due to soil erosion while gentle slopes encourage settlement.

4. Drainage

Areas with water bodies attract more people than areas with few water bodies.

5. Birth and death rate:

Areas with high birth rate and low death rate have high population while areas with low birth rate and a high death rate have low population.

6. Nature of vegetation

Areas with thick vegetation have sparse population while areas with savanna vegetation have a high population.
