Brick making is a very good economic activity. Some youths today do not like to engage in brick making simply because it is tiresome and makes them dirty. They forget one fact that no job is easy and money doesn't come easily. However, making bricks involves a lot of planning if you plan to engage in making bricks as a source of income, you must identify a steady supply of clay soil, water and firewood.

Once the above are in place, then the process begins, first, you have to prepare a clearing where the clay soil is placed.

Secondly, you dig out the clay from the swamp. When you have heaped enough, then the clay is cleared off all other particles like stones, sticks and grass. It is then mixed with water and kneaded until it becomes soft.

A wooden container known as a mould is then used to make out the shape of the bricks. When a good number of bricks have been made, they are put in a shade made of grass thatch or polythene to dry. After the bricks are dry, they are heaped and arranged into a kiln and thus ready for firing. Finally, firing takes a day or two and when the bricks have cooled, they are ready for sale.
